And still I rise to overcome my Fear Of Failure. The fear of failing The fear of getting laughed at. The fear of something new that's not my best choice. I've always been scared to fail so I never tried. I've failed so many classes my high school year leaving me in the dirt for my senior year. But Still I Rise to fear of failure. Scared of what others would think so I've tried to be that perfect someone with no flaws, but even the perfect people fail. People are scared to fail because It limits your chances for success, they say "failure is the greater teacher" and they use it to learn off what they did wrong. It's essentially a fear of shame and guilt, and it gets to the core of our egos our identity, or self-esteem, and our emotional well being. It's a threat to motivation and it allows them not to move forward so they miss great opportunities along the way. I'm glad I failed in some things because i would've never been where I am today, at a Alternative school in Lees Summit. It's actually a good thing for me because I get to meet all these great people who actually care about you and go out of their way to do whatever.

Failing makes you worry about what other people think about you. It makes you worry about your ability to pursue the future you desire. It makes you worry that people will lose interest in you. It makes you worry about how smart or capable you are. It makes you worry about disappointing people whose opinion you value. You tend to tell people beforehand that you don't expect to succeed in order to lower their expectations. Once you fail at something, you have trouble imagining what you could have done differently to succeed. You often get distracted by tasks that prevent you from completing your preparation which, in hindsight, were not as urgent as they seemed at the time. Even the most successful people failed in life that how they became successful. Don't be afraid to fail.

I personally can say Failure was my greatest thing not to sound weird or anything but I actually learned from it. I learned alot and it's helping me see where I made the mistakes in life at. My advice to anyone who is failing in something is to try again and don't give up because you will get through it like I did. Somedays I felt like my world was ending, I couldn't let people see me fail so I tried until I made it through the tough times in high school.